Source A: Using Comparison Websites

Through 1998 and 1999, various firms developed technology that searched retailers' websites for prices and stored them in a central database. Users could then search for a product, and see a list of retailers and prices for that product.

It is a convenient way to check quotes for goods and services at any time of the day or night. This can save a customer money as it enables them to choose the lowest price available on the website.

Not all retailers use comparison websites to inform customers of their prices so a customer could miss out on cheaper prices with these retailers.

The initial price quoted by the retailer may not necessarily be the final one as other add-ons may be applied, so there may not be as much saving as initially thought.
